Scrofula of Lungs.

I am now 40 years old, and have suffered for the last fifteen years with a lung trouble. I have spent thousands of dollars to arrest the march of this disease, but temporary relief was all that I obtained. I was unfit for any manual labor for several years. A friend strongly recommended the use of Swift's Specific (S. S.), claiming that he himself sail been greatly benefited by its use in some lung troubles. I resolved to try it. The results are remarkable. My cough has left use, my strength has returned, and I weigh sixty pounds more than I ever did in my life. It has been three years since I stopped the use of the medicine, but I have had no return of the disease, and there are no pains or weakness felt in my lungs. I do the hardest kind of mechanical work, and feel as well as I ever felt since I was a boy. These, I know, are wonderful statements to make, but I am honest when I say that I owe my existence and I calth te-day to S. S. S. I would be recreant to the cuty I owe to humanity if I failed to Lear this cheerful testimony to the merits of this wonderful medicine.

A DAY ATTHE WHITE HOUSE.

DIPLOMATS IN SOCIETY.

Mr. Cleveland at the Theatre-Presidential Pecultarities Congressional Gossin.

"Our Presidents," says an old Washngton correspondent, "are blessed with enough of the ordinary humanity o make their peculiarities noticeable." General Grant was known as the eternal sphinx, who was proof against the interviewer, and yet, when with a crowd of friends, he was not only chatty but remarkably entertaining. Grant's successor, Hayes, was just the opposite in this particular. He was all smiles, with a tendency to the constant and meaningless grin. No man ever went to him who did not leave the ever went to him who did not leave the Presidential presence satisfied that his request would be granted. But this was not the case. Mr. Hayes would say "all right," and make a memorandum in his little note book. Matt Carpenter once said: "Hayes always makes a note of his promises for fear he will keep one of them." Garfield was perhaps the most successful gusher who ever sat in the Presidential chair. When one of his old colleagues in the House would call he would jump up, grab him by the hand and salute him as "old boy" or "my dear fellow," always using the caller's first name. ExCongressman Hazelton remarking on Congressman Hazelton remarking on the difference in the manner of meetthe difference in the manner of meet-ing callers between Arthur and Gar-field, said he preferred the style of the former. He said in his plain, blunt Wisconsin style: "With Garfield it is 'old fellow' and 'my dear boy;' but old fellow and dear boy is all you ever got."

"Now that the President has broken the ice," said a well-known Washingtonian the other day to Stealey of the New York Star, "I suppose he will be going to the theatres once a week at least. In fact, I think he ought to. There is nothing which will rest a man so much as going to the theatre. I heard Mr. Lincoln once say, when he was theroughly fagged out from the badgering of office-seekers and the advice and suggestions of people who thought they knew how to ran the Government and the army better than he did, that he always went to the theatre and had a good laugh. Now, when President Cleveland was at the when President Cleveland was at the new National Theatre on Wednesday night last, he seemed to enjoy himself thoroughly. He laughed at Bifly Florence in 'Our Governor,' and he admired the costumes of Mrs. Florence as Matilda Starr. He seemed to have put all care behind him, and entered perfectly into the enjoyment of the oc-

The diplomatic world of Washington is a peculiar one, says the correspond-ent of the New Orleans States. Anybody who is a diplomat is well received in society. In fact, most diplomats are courted by the social world, and it is a very agreeable thing too, to them, for your average diplomat has little to do except to indulge in this sort of thing. The social world generally, however, does not satisfy your average diplomat, for a very large proportion of them find the use of the English language a burden, and they are very glad to have the opportunity of meeting with those who speak a lan guage with which they are more famil-iar. The result is that there are a great many quiet entertainments going back and forth among these foreigners. They all speak French, of course, and apparently enjoy these quiet entertainments of their own very much. So that while the winter is likely to be a brilliant one among the diplomats, so far as general society goes, it will not interfere with the workings of this wheel within the social wheels. The Japanese Minister evidently intends to make this, his second winter in Washington, an extremely brilliant one. He is understood to be a gentleman of wealth and social experience.

It is said that already the signatures of sixty-eight Democratic members of the House are affixed to a paper declaring that one of two things must be done: Either all legislation on the appropriation bills must be prohibited and the bills be required to be reported within a certain limited time early in the session, or else all bills, except the deficiency, the sundry civil, the legislative and the District of Columbia, and probably the fortification, shall be taken from the Appropriations Com-mittee and distributed among the various committees having charge of the legislation bearing upon the subject of the bills. It is expected, says the Phil-adelphia News, that Mr. Randall, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and the other members of the committee will oppose this proposition, and a lively scrimmage, which will take up most of the time of the House until the holiday recess, is looked for.

President Cleveland dresses well. His sual suit is one of black broadcloth, with the coat double-breasted and tightly buttoned about the body. He wears good boots, and these always shine brighter than those of any of his callers. His linen is always white, and he puts on a new turnover collar every day. His favorite necktie is one of black, very quiet and modest in its tie. The President ties it himself, and he oes not require the assistance of a valet making his tollet. He wears, you know, a mustache, which is rather heavy and of a brown color.

The rest of his face he shaves
with his own hands every morning.

Mr. Cleveland is also an early riser and a hard worker. As soon as he is

He generally takes Colonel Lamont, his prierally takes Colonel Lamont, his private secretary, with him, and he is fast exploring the country in the vicinity of Washington. Now and then he drives out in the direction of Secretary Whitney's country home, and I doubt not that this, in the future, will make quite a rendezvous for the Cabinet and the President, After his ride President Cleveland takes his dinner. This is a piain meal, some-times with wing, and sometimes with-out. After dinner the President goes out. After dinner the President goes back to work many times, and you will often see a light burning in his room, if you cross the White House lot, long after midnight. He requires little sleep, and can stand a great deal of hard work at a stretch. He is fortunate in having a strong helper in Colonal Langer. in Colonel Lamont.

Commenting on the fact that comparatively so few distinguished colegians attain eminence in public life, the St. Paul Globe says: "Among prominent military men who graduated at West Point on the wrong end of their classes are Grant, Sheridan, Buell, Hardee, C. F. Smith, H. J. Hunt, Ord, D. A. Russell (killed), Governor Stoneman of California, R. B. Ayers, Richard Griffen and Wesley Merritt. Among other military men whose graduating honors were far from a success, but who afterward became famous, are: Longstreet, who was fifty-fourth in a class of fifty-six; was fifty-fourth in a class of fifty-six; General Sykes, the thirty-ninth of his class; General W. S. Hancock, eigh-teenth in a class of twenty-five; Gen-eral George A. R. S. Canby, slain by the Modocs, and an able man, the last in his graduating class; T. G. Pitcher, afterward superintendent at West Point, the fortieth in a class of forty-one; N. H. SENSE IN DRESS.

A Noted Authority Advises Young Ladies About Steeves and Stockings. Perfect health, says Dr. Dio Lewis, depends upon perfect eliculation. Every living thing that has the latter has the former. Put your hand under your dress, upon your body; now put your hand upon your arm. If you find the body is warm and your arm cold you have lost the equilibrium. The head has too much blood, producing headache or sense of fullness; or the chest has too much blood, producing cough, rapid breathing, pain in the side, or palpitation of the heart; or the stomach has too much blood, producing indigestion; or the liver has too much blood, producing some dis-turbance; or the bowels have too much blood, producing constipation or diar-rhoa. Any of all these difficulties are temporarily relieved by immersion of the feet or bands in hot water, and they are permanently relieved by such dress and exercise of the extremities as will make the derivation per-

The extremities require as much clothing as the body. Women should dress their arms and legs with one or two thicknesses of knit woolen garments which fit them. The absurdities of loose flowing sleeves and wide-spread skirts I will not discuss.

Do you ask why the arms and legs may not become accustomed to ex-posure, like the face. I answer, God has provided the face with an im-mense circulation because it must be exposed.

attire demands that the broad expanse of white exposed by the low-cut evening dress be furnished either by a plaited shirt bosom or one of pique embroidered in dots. Naturally these elaborate fronts call for more than one stud. hence three studs are again the correct style for evening dress. With this increased demand have come some changes in the fashion of the studs themselves, the very newest style being represented by moonstone buttons set in slender gold rims. Ladies' Luncheons. Says Mrs. Eliza R. Parker, in "Good Housekeeping:" "Luncheon for the family is always a very simple affair, and is generally composed entirely of cold meats, fish and bread. For guests it is very similar to the late breakfast. Ladies only are invited to lunch, however. The hour for this repast is seldom earlier than 1 o'clock, and sometimes much later. A luncheon given to invited guests can be made up of saiads, oysters, and various dishes, but some very fashionable peo-ple effect great simplicity, upon such occasions, giving only a cup of tea or chocolate, some thin slices of bread and butter with cold tongue, or even dainty little crackers or wafers, think-ing it more healthful to reserve the appetite for dinner; but in either style good taste may be displayed in the ar-rangement of the table, which may be decorated with flowers or fruit; I fancy cakes and bonbons. The tablecloth and napkins are usually colored. The courses should be fewer in number than for a breakfast party, and the dishes should be such as do not require carving. Bouillion should be served first in little cups, then tea, coffee or chocolate with the substantials. Guests observe the same rules of etiquette at luncheon as at breakfast, and are not expected to remain longer than half an hour after leaving the dining-room.

STILL MORE POISONING.

WILL THE BLAME BE PASTENED

ON THE DRUGGISTS OR THE MANUFACTURERS? Scientific Investigation. FROM THE PHILADELPHIA, ERCORD. The carelessness with which poisons are handled has been unfavorably commented on by the press, and practical suggestions are made as to methods by which to avoid such accidents in the future. But people are liable also to another danger, which is more wideanother danger, which is more widespread in its effects than would be the carelessness or thoughtlessness of a drug clerk. There are twenty thousand druggists in the United States, and nearly all of them are licensed to sell liquor, in fact it may be assumed that at least one-sixth of all the whiskey consumed in the United States is sold by druggists. Large quantities of it are used as one of the ingredients in physicians' prescriptions, and while it may be true, as is sometimes claimed, that there are doctors who do not prescribe alcoholic liquors in cases of sickness, they are the exception—

scribe alcoholic liquors in cases of sickness, they are the exception— not the rule. All medical men who are not prejudiced know the value of good liquor in a sick room, and order it freely in many cases, such as feeble digestion of old people, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, acute dyspepsia, consumption, hem-orrhages and other lung troubles, and to counteract the depression caused by pneumonia, fever and in fact all in-flammatory diseases. But whiskey is fiammatory diseases. But whiskey is not always put up with a prescription; it is sometimes ordered to be taken separately, and in that case there is nothing more natural than that the druggist who furnishes the medicine should also be called upon to supply the liquor. Women, from the peculiar character of their organism, often need a stimulant, and, of course, it is obtained at the drug store, in fact, it may be said that alcohol, in some shape or other, plays as important a part in medical treatment as any drug in the modern pharmacopocia.

Now it is somewhat strange that while medical men are constantly insisting on the necessity of purity in drugs, if they are to have the desired effect on those to whom they are administered, they are positively silent as to the character of the whiskey which their patients secure at drug stores. It is admitted, even by members of the trade themselves, that as a rule the druggist handles the lowest, poorest and cheapest whiskles that are manufactured, liable as they are to be imposed on like other people.

In a recent conversation with a

In a recent conversation with a wholesale liquor dealer, the writer learned several facts which induced learned several facts which induced him to visit a number of drug stores and purchase a small quantity of the whiskey sold there; about a dozen samples were obtained, all of which were carefully subjected to analysis, and the result obtained was certainly startling; vitriol, logwood, creosots and catechen were found freely, while the coloring matter was equally as poisonous as that which is used in deceiving people with so-called green tea. It would not be difficult even for the non-professional mind to form an idea as to the effects of such whiskey upon the system. Administered to sick people with their constitutions already enfeebled by disease, or taken by nervous, delicate and over-worked women, the evil done must be terrible. Medical men are not true to the obligations cal men are not true to the obligations which the almost sacred character of their profession entails upon them, s long as they even indirectly countenance such a state of things, and they ought to join together in seeing that their druggist's whiskey is as free from im-purities as his colomel or his quinine. But, says some objector, the best and safest way would be for physicians never to prescribe whiskey. Would this pre-vent the patient from using it when his system craves for it? Decidelly not. Besides, alcohol in spite of all that may be said to the contrary, is admitted by eminent physiologists to be an article of food, and necessary to the system, even when perfect health is enjoyed. There are many people who occa-sionly feel the need of a tonic, but from some cause or other are opposed to tak-ing whiskey; such people generally compromise on some one of the numerous bitters with which the market is flooded, laying the flattering unction to their souls that they are using some-thing surely vegetable, composed in fact of samples from the laboratory of nature. There is no exaggeration in saying that as a rule these nauseous compounds consist chiefly of the vilest compounds consist chiefly of the vilost and cheapest whiskey, carefully dis-guised by some flavor, but destructive to the system. Any exhibitation that may be felt after taking these decoc-tions is simply due to the presence of the alcohol, and not to any tonic, and when the effects wear off, the liver is even more sluggish, the workings of the heart more irregular, and the receptive qualities of the stomach feebler than

For many years the experiments of the scientists, chemists and druggists had failed to eliminate from alcohol the fusel oil poison, and it was not until the Duffy's pure malt whiskey was pro-duced that a perfectly pure distillation for medicinal purposes was obtained, and which is now adopted by physicians everywhere in their practice, and dis-pensed by druggists on their prescrip-ions.

There now remains no excuse for druggists handling and selling a poor and victous article, as they will have in Duffy's the purest and best, upon which the health and welfare of the community so much depend.
